

If We Do Nothing the CBR is Threatened. This Chart Shows When the CBR Would Run Dry

- The gap between State spending and revenues is so large that our State savings account, the Constitutional Budget Reserve (CBR), will be drained by 2003.
- The State of Alaska has not had one budget that has stood on its own since 1992. Since then, legislators have filled the gap in the budget by borrowing more than $3.4 billion from our savings account to balance these budgets.
